

Admissions

Power To Play Sports does not charge individual admissions at tournaments. In an attempt to once again lower costs for teams and families participating, we have implemented a team admission fee at a discounted rate. We will no longer have admission sales at tournaments taking individual payment. Instead, teams participating pay a one-day, or two-day admission team pass fee prior to the tournament. This saves teams at least 50% of the total fees of grandparents, sisters, brothers, and parents watching the games and will have no monitoring throughout the day when people enter the facilities.

The fee is $100.00 per day or $150.00 per two day tournament and is required for all teams participating in the tournament. How does this save money? On average, a team pays nearly $300.00 per weekend tournament between all of its fans (parents, sisters, grandparents, etc). In many situations, where there are 4 to a family, as an example, that family alone has had to pay $36.00 over a weekend to watch games. When you multiply this by 8-10 players on a team, the real savings can be seen.

Why would we do this and make less money? It's not about making the most money. It's about listening to the customers and accommodating their requests and helping our program continue to be the best in the country for youth basketball, and saving money for everyone involved is a big part of that process.
